This is a fiction novel. Any similarities to real life, or imagined would be entirely coincidence. None of the events here are based on real life events, news or stories. These are all imaginary tales from the author's mind for drama and suspense. The events and time period of these events were portrayed from the Martial law period and shortly after that. The reader must realize that there are no Jueteng numbers' game anymore, thanks for the hardwork outstanding generals of PNP, two of which are my friends, the Philippines are making advances in Financial health even during the period of Financial "meltdown" in America and in Europe, and crime and murders in the Philippines are lowest than it had ever been. More, the local governments now have broader control on the police force. For decades, the use of vouchers has been widely debated. But often lost in the heat of debate is the fact that vouchers are just another tool in the government's tool chest, a restricted subsidy that falls somewhere between the extremes of cash and direct government provision of services. The instrument itself is not new—the 1944 GI Bill of Rights was a voucher, and vouchers for food, college aid, and housing have been in place for decades. Until now, however, the study of vouchers has been restricted to a few controversial applications. This volume, which grew out of a conference sponsored by the Brookings Institution, the Urban Institute, and the Committee for Economic Development, fills the gap, offering a framework for comparative analysis of specific policy issues related to vouchers. Its 16 essays address the economics, politics, and legal issues of voucher use and explore how vouchers are currently employed in the United States and abroad for education, child care, job training, housing, and health care. C. Eugene Steuerle is a senior fellow at the Urban Institute and has worked under four different U.S. presidents on a variety of reform issues in such areas as social security, budget, tax, and health policy. Robert D. Reischauer, a senior fellow in Economic Studies at the Brookings Institution, was director of the Congressional Budget Office from 1989 to 1995. George Peterson is a senior fellow at the Urban Institute; from 1976 to 1985 he directed the Institute's Public Finance Research Center. Van Doorn Ooms, senior vice president and director of research at the Committee for Economic Development, was formerly executive director for policy and chief economist of the Committee on the Budget, U.S. House of Representatives, 1989-1990, and was the Budget Committee's chief economist from 1981 to 1988.

"This annotated bibliography includes entries that describe the general situation of the Filipino youth, based on the data and findings of national youth surveys (E.G., NFO- Trends Youth Study 2001, McCann Youth Study 2000) and reports of national conferences on Filipino children and youth. A significant number of studies deal with youth culture and behaviour - the culture of students, their political attitudes, religious beliefs, family values, perceptions of their sexuality and their premarital experiences. Other works are on deviance - juvenile delinquency, fraternity violence, rape and sexual violence, sexual molestation, and prostitution"--P. [v].

This book discusses mass higher education development in East Asian countries by means of three main issues: the strategy for higher education development; the way professors and students in the region are experiencing the rapid developments; and the challenges imposed by mass higher education. These challenges include the quality of education as well as structural changes in the rapidly developing systems, funding sources for supporting mass higher education, and job markets for college graduates. Part I discusses how the East Asian countries have accomplished or are in the process of accomplishing the rapid development of higher education. Japan, Korea, China, Taiwan, Malaysia, Singapore, and Hong Kong serve as case studies of mass higher education in the region. The case studies introduce and discuss national strategies to develop higher education, funding sources and mechanisms, and initiatives to assure quality of education in a period of rapid growth. Part II and Part III of the book focus on the phenomena of mass higher education in the region and the influence on academia. Mass higher education changes professors and students, who are different from those in elite higher education. Part III further discusses the challenges posed to Asian mass higher education. The Comparative and International Education Society Higher Education (HESIG) has awarded Mass Higher Education Development in East Asia the Higher Education SIG Best Book Award 2015.
